Deaf Education in the 21st Century: Topics and Trends by ...

Deaf Education in the 21st Century paints a very broad picture of how the population of D/HH students are educated in schools. In my time, residential schools and deaf programs were the norms. So was the sight of scars on the head near student's ears that were without a cochlear implant. Today, things have changed significantly. Most are being taught in public schools with many of them having at least one cochlear implant (I am starting to see bilateral implants more regularly now).
